presents a talk by

Dr. Cheryl Bartlett

"Sometimes it's like a heavy sledge"

Science, Two-Eyed Seeing, Co-Learning, and Cultural Humility

Dr. Bartlett, of newcomer/settler heritage originally from Southern Alberta, has worked closely and tirelessly for more than two decades with Mi'kmaq Elders Albert and Murdena Marshall of Eskasoni First Nation to create the integrative science program and to ensure that all efforts were guided by the principle of "Two-Eyed Seeing" (learn to see the best in both world-views & learn to use these strengths together). Their concept has been picked up across the nation and is critical for moving forward in this time of reconciliation.

Dr. Bartlett is a Professor Emerita, Tier I Canada Research Chair in Integrative Science, Order of Canada, Cape Breton University.
