

The Prentice Institute Brown Bag Series – Winter 2016

Jan Newberry, Anthropology Department, Institute for Child and Youth Studies (I-CYS), Prentice Institute Research Affiliate, University of Lethbridge

What does Early Childhood Education and Care have to do with Global Political Economy?

Early childhood education, care and development programs have spread across the globe since 2000. These programs dedicated to school-readiness and the development of healthy brains and children are a powerful global assemblage that connects education enterprise, brain science, and community-led development. Based on fieldwork in Indonesia, Jan Newberry, considers these “developments” in terms of childhood studies and global political economy to argue for the continuing relevance of social reproduction.

Moderator: William Ramp, Prentice Institute Research Affiliate, Director of UofL Centre for Culture and Community and Associate Professor of Sociology

Friday 28 October 2016
12:00 pm - 1:30 pm Room L1102

the Prentice Institute for Global Population and Economy

*Prentice Institute has gone GREEN! Please bring your own travel mug and/or water bottle.
coffee/tea/water will be available.